"MARKET YOUR COTTON SLOWLY"

—FARMERS' UNION OFFICIAL.

STATEMENT ISSUED FROM HEAD-QUARTERS OF ORGANIZATION IN STATE OF TEXAS.

TAKE ISSUE WITH BROKER

Some Assertions of a New Yorker Are Questioned and Arguments Submitted Publicly.

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 21.—In a statement issued here today, officials of the Texas State Farmers' Union call in question some of the assertions lately made by a New York broker regarding the present cotton crop and call upon all interested to give no heed to what the New Yorker says. In concluding, the farmers' Union official says:

"A great deal depends upon the effort of the farmers to use every available means to market this crop slowly, realizing that every honorable means should be used to get a just price for this crop, which would be a much better price than is now offered."

The statement by the New Yorker, to which the Farmers Union people take greatest exception, is: "I shall endeavor to demonstrate why the consumer will do wisely to disregard the hysterical appeal to buy cotton now lest it go to 16c, when as a matter of fact, this appeal is loudest in the mouth of those who have cotton to sell."

The purpose of this is declared to be to break the cotton market. It is asserted that the writer is arrayed against the cotton farmer, the merchant whom the cotton farmer owes and the wholesale merchant whom that merchant owes. Further, the official says: "He is arrayed against the country banks, whom the farmer and the country merchant owe, and against the city banker, whom the country banker owes. On which side ought these influences to align themselves?
With this man who is trying to break the market by indirectly advising consumers of cotton to boycott the market until his purpose shall have been accomplished, or the Southern farmer who is trying to get a fair price for the fruits of his toil and to bring to the South the real value of its great money crop? The cotton farmer by honest labor produces hundreds of millions of dollars worth of products each year, which gives life to every business from Maine to California and from ocean to ocean."

The contention is made that just in proportion as brokers succeed in forcing down the price the money in the banks and the profits of the merchants will dwindle and the amount of our balance of trade decreases. The cotton farmer wants to pay his debts, it is declared. He has nothing but his poor cotton crop out of which to get the money to pay them. "Upon his ability to pay his debts depends the ability of his merchant and banker to pay theirs and so to the most remote manufacturer and banker. The ability of all of them to meet their financial obligations rests upon the farmer's ability to meet his.

"Many cotton farmers have planted several times this year," the Farmers Union says. "Their children who ought to be in school are now in the cotton fields trying to save every dollar possible in order that they may have as much money as possible with which to meet their debts and raise another crop."

"This is the situation. Now, it is a fair and reasonable question to ask the business men and bankers, especially of the South, on which side is the weight of your influence falling? On the side of the cotton farmer upon whose ability to pay his debts depends your ability to collect the debts owing to you and to meet your own obligation, or upon the side of this man whose success means your own financial hurt?"

The merchants and bankers are asked how they could better serve the broker's purpose than by exerting their influence in such a way as to encourage the rushing of cotton upon the market, as some are doing.

"Can you not serve him just as well," the farmers representatives ask "by just withholding your influence and permit it to be dumped on a glutted market, as much of it is being done now?"

There must be some check to the rapidity with which cotton is being sold, it is contended. It ought to be sold more gradually. Therefore the Farmers Union invites the assistance of the bankers and business men to help do this.

The statement is signed by W. T.
Loudermilk, president; Peter Read-ford, vice president; Nellie Horton, secretary-treasurer; C. Smith, assistant secretary; J. L. McConkey, chairman of the executive committee, and J. C. Albritton, central cotton agent.

The cases of the state against Ol-

FEDERAL JUDGE ISSUES IN- JUNCTION AGAINST OKLAHOMA

HEARING WILL TAKE PLACE MON-DAY AS TO PIPING OIL AND GAS FROM THE STATE BORDERS.

McAlester, Okla., Sept. 21.—The pipe line gas cases brought against Gov. Haskell, Attorney General West and other state officials in the United States court, to enjoin them from interfering with the representatives of a number of natural gas and oil concerns, wherein they were attempting to prevent or restrain them from piping gas out of the state, were called in the federal court here today, and Judge Campbell announced that a temporary injunction would be issued; that the aggregate bonds would be fixed at $325,000 and that the hearing would be set for next Monday.

A stipulation had hitherto been filed in this case. It was agreed that the cases should remain in statu quo until an appeal had been perfected on one point, but it appears there was either a misunderstanding or a disagreement on this, and Judge Campbell, on his former decision rendered in chambers, entered the order today.

The following is the Dallas News report of the opening of the Ada Normal:

Ada, Okla., Sept. 20.—Oklahoma East Central Normal school opened here its first session this morning at 9 o'clock amid the blowing of whistles and ringing of bells over the city. The faculty and student body met in the First M. E. church, South, on South Townsend avenue to organize, on account of the High School building not being quite ready for occupancy. A large crowd of Ada citizens packed the church to overflowing. Welcome addresses were made by the mayor of Ada, the president of the 25,000 club and representatives of the churches, schools, Sunday schools and clubs of the city, followed by addresses by State Senator R. M. Rod-die and Representative E. S. Ratliff of this city. Response to the addresses was delivered by the president of the new normal school, Dr. C. H. Briles.
The school opened with an enroll-

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 20.—At 11 p. m. the water is entering the Western

The wind has changed and is blowing the water straight toward the city.

Indications now point to a storm of severe proportions.

At 10:45 p. m. the water in the bay is backing over Water street.

This is nearly as high as the storm of 1906, and the city's only protection against a flood is its levees and dikes.

That these are strong and high is conceded, and in this fact lies the hopes of the safety for the beautiful former capital of the former French Empire in America.

ADA EAST CENTRAL NORMAL IN CLOSE PURSUIT ED- MOND NORMAL

Ada's Splendid Normal Enrollment so Early, Under Such Difficulties Gratifying—Ada School One Week Old, Edmond 12 Years.

President Briles of the Normal has just received a letter from President McLaughlin, of the Edmond Normal, inquiring about the enrollment of the East Central at the close of the first week. He states that the Central Normal at Edmond at the close of their first week, last Friday, had enrolled four hundred and seventy-two pupils. President Briles states that today the enrollment of the East Central is two hundred and eighty-six and that by Friday he is confident that the enrollment will reach three hundred.

It is gratifying to those interested in the success of Ada's new normal school to know that they are already within a hundred and seventy-two pupils of the largest and oldest normal school of the state. There can be no doubt but that the East Central gives promise of being, within a short time, the largest normal school of the state.

This store is the home of Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes.

You're going to have this coming fall, a chance to buy and wear the best clothes in the world; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes are to be the feature of our line the coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time when you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money. You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality HART SCHAFFNER & MARX put into their goods. They're all-wool, in every thread of the fabrics; they represent the products of the best weavers in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half dozen other makes put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interests as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here. They're correct in style, of course; and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong. Hart Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

There's a lot of inferior, cotton-mixed clothing in the market; pretty poor stuff, some of it. It looks pretty good; enough so to enable dealers to charge a good price for it; it isn't as a rule worth what it costs.

GOV. JOHNSON DIES AFTER BRAVE FIGHT

MINNESOTA'S GREAT SON, THREE TIMES GOVERNOR, PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY EXPIRES
TUESDAY.

Pats Faithful Wife on Cheek; With "Well, Nora, I Guess I Am Going, We Have Made a Brave Fight."

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 21.—Gov.
Johnson, three times elected governor of Minnesota, a candidate for the democratic nomination for president of the United States in 1908 and looked upon by many throughout the country as the probable democratic national standard bearer in 1912, died at St. Mary's hospital here at 3:25 o'clock this morning, following an operation last Wednesday.

Wife at Bedside.

Gov. Johnsons life hung continually in the balance until the end came.
So frequently did his condition change alternately for better and then for worse that his physicians, ever hopeful, but none too optimistic were able to say at no time since the operation was performed that the governor had more than an even chance for his life. At his bedside when the end came were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Margaret Sullivan, her friend, Drs. W. J. and Charles H.
Mayo, Dr. C. N. McNevin, Frank A.
Day, the governor's secretary; Fred B. Lynch, democratic national committeeman, and Misses Janie and Schiller, the governor's nurses.

Dr. W. J. Mayo stated there were no traces of blood poisoning and that the immediate cause of death was exhaustion and heart failure.

It being the fifth day after the operation, the one when the crisis usually arrives in a case of this kind, unusual apprehension was felt by the physicians yesterday. Dr. C.
H. Mayo, coming from the governor's room at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, said that the patient's wonderful endurance indicated almost total abstinence from stimulants in any form.

Patient's Wonderful Vitality.

His vitality is almost that of a child," said the doctor, "and this has been the greatest factor in prolonging his existence."

Considerable encouragement was felt during the morning when the governor took chicken broth and was able to retain it. This he had been unable to do previously. When the governor had breathed his last Mrs.
Johnson, who had been in attendance at her husband's side and who had borne up bravely under the ordeal, totally collapsed and was taken to the Sullivan home.

Gov. Johnson was in a lethargic state during the greater part of the night, but occasionally was aroused, especially after coughing and would then mutter a few words to Mrs. Johnson. At times he seemed to wish that the end might come, for on one occasion he said:

"My, the time drags slowly; I am so uncomfortable."

Last Words to Wife.

The governor lapsed into unconsciousness at 1 o'clock. Toward the end he revived and raised himself several times to pat his wife on the cheek. His last words were:

"Well, Nora, I guess I'm going; we have made a brave fight."

Gov. Johnson's Career.

John A. Johnson, self-made man, journalist and governor of Minnesota, was born at St. Peter, Minn., of Swedish lineage July 28, 1861. G.
Johnson and Caroline Haden Johnson his parents, were natives of Sweden. He was educated in the public schools of his native town, attending until he was 12 years of age. Then the death of his father left the support of the family, in which were several smaller children, upon him and his mother. He left school and went to work.

His first work was in a drug store in St. Peter. Working hard and saving his money, he took a position in the office of the St. Peter Herald and learned the newspaper business.
After a time he was able to purchase an interest in the institution. In a little while he was the editor of the paper. There it was that he got his first taste of things political and was fired with an ambition to become a political leader.

Along with his work at St. Peter, he became a member of the Minnesota National Guard and was for seven years consecutively and actively connected with that organization, becoming a captain.

Elected to the state senate from the St. Peter district, he served for two years, beginning in 1902. In 1904 he was elected as a democrat to be governor of a state heavily and normally republican. He was re-elected in 1906 and 1908. His second term especially is noted for the passage at his urging of a law taxing the sleeping car companies operating in the state; for the securing by legislation and by commission action of the substantial reduction of freight rates, and the securing of a 2c fare for passenger service on the railways of his state. He was a power among the Swedish population, which is a large one in his state, and has never been defeated for any office to which he aspired, when he was in a race before the people. He was proposed as a democratic candidate for the presidency in 1908 and has been much talked of for 1912.

One of the things that is said to have endeared him to his people was his pride in his family, his people and his native place. His home has always been in St. Peter. In the first campaign for the governorship it was reported by his enemies that parentage was humble. He admitted it.
His friends showed that after the death of the father, when the 12-year-old boy went to work, his mother, though they had lived in comparative ease during the life of the father, took in washing to help in the care of the orphans. This continued until John was sufficiently established to make it unnecessary. The taunt was turned and it is said to have had a large part in electing him to the office.

Governor Johnson has always been a deeply religious man without any vicious habits. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and a faithful worker. Politically he has always been a party democrat and it is said of him that he never bolted a platform nor failed to carry out one which he had supported in any political campaign.

He was married at St. Peter June 1, 1894, to Miss Elinore Preston.

DORSET CARTER

BEGINS FIGHT

YOUNG PRESIDENT OKLAHOMA
CENTRAL, BACKED BY FEDES-ATED BUSINESS CLUBS OPPOSE SECTION 9, ARTICLE 9.

Seek Special Election—Santa Fe Line Interested in Campaign Against Constitutional Act.

The first move in the fight of certain interests to amend Article 9, Section 9 of the state constitution, a move which has been agitated since early May, was undertaken throughout the state yesterday when, primarily at the instance of Dorset Carter, president of the Oklahoma Central railway, petitions were circulated asking Governor Haskell to call a special election for the purpose of considering the elimination of the section referred to.

Mr. Carter has been laying plans for some weeks past for the promulgation of the petitions. The section in question prevents one railroad from owning or controlling another in the state unless it maintain separate general offices and a distinct management with offices in the state.

Backed by Federation.

The petition is backed by the Federation of Commercial clubs of the state, and the specific relief sought, though unofficial, is the absorption of the Oklahoma Central railroad by the Santa Fe. Under the present law this is prohibited by the constitution.

Whether or not the proposed change has the endorsement of the governor or the corporation commission is not known. It is known, however, that a copy of the proposed amendment was taken to Sulphur and that Governor Haskell was aware of its existence.
And it was immediately afterward that the petitions began to circulate.
It is reported the amendment will be bitterly opposed by some of the corporation commissioners, at least.

The Oklahoma Central railroad is a short independent line built by Dorset Carter and others, running south from Purcell. Before it was fairly started it went into the hands of a receiver, which is its present status. It is understood from inside sources that the Santa Fe railway wants to take over this road, as it makes a valuable feeder for that system, connecting at Purcell. It is believed that this is the only case pending where a deal would be immediately consummated in event of a favorable change in the constitution, though the effect of the repeal would be extensive.

PROMINENT BISHOP DIES IN JAPAN

GREAT METHODIST DIVINE, SETH WARD WAS BORN AND RAISED IN TEXAS.

Bishop Ward Had Been in Japan More Than Month Inspecting Methodist Missions When Illness Came.

Tokio, Sept. 20.—Bishop Seth Ward of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, died this afternoon. The bishop arrived at Kobe last month on a regular tour of inspection of the Methodist missions in Japan and he was taken ill shortly after his arrival. Last week he was reported gradually sinking, and the fatal termination of his illness was not unexpected.

Bishop Ward, who came from Houston, Tex., sailed from San Francisco late in July to make an annual inspection of the work of his church's foreign missionary work. While he was not suffering from any chronic complaint, it was known he was in poor health, and friends attempted to dissuade him from the trip.

The bishop was 51 years old. He served as assistant missionary secretary of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, from 1902 until 1906 and was elected bishop in the latter year.

DR. COOK REACHES HOME, AMERICA

WHEN POLE CONQUEROR GREETED WIFE AND CHILDREN, FELLOW PASSENGERS CHEER.

Will Prove Case to the World; No OFFICIAL GREETING FROM HIS NATION, STATE OR CITY.

New York, Sept. 21.—"I have come from the Pole. I have brought my story and my data with me. I have not come home to enter into arguments with one man or with fifty men, but I am here to present a clear record of a piece of work over which I have a right to display a certain amount of pride.

"I am perfectly willing to abide by the final verdict of this record of competent judges. That must be the last word, and that alone can satisfy the public.

"Furthermore, not only will my report be before you in black and white, but I will also bring to America human witnesses to prove that I have been to the Pole."

Such is the sum and substance of the first message Dr. Frederick A. Cook brought home in person to America today, answering his critics, the world over. Under seas and over land it traveled north as fast as electricity could carry it to where another explorer, Robert E. Peary, homeward bound from the Pole, was pacing the decks with his hand to his eyes for a sight of his wife and children.

Throughout a long and arduous night the flotilla of tugboats, outposts of a continental curiosity, has tossed in the darkness for a first glimpse of the Oscar II., bearing the man for whom a Nation awaited word.

Dr. Cook Up Early.

At 5 o'clock this morning the explorer was on deck. The Oscar II. has purposely been held back yesterday to not disarrange the reception plans of the Arctic Club of America, but leaving Fire Island shortly after midnight as she nosed her way into quarantine an hour too early for everybody but Dr. Cook.

Dr. Cook lowered a signed statement in a pail to the Associated Press and resumed his pace to and fro and up and down the landward rail.

Explorer Greets Family.

A speck in the distance began to assume dimensions. Presently it was recognizable as the tug bearing Mrs. Cook and her two daughters. Quickly the tug came alongside, and while the heavy swell was running around her fenders against the plates of her big sister, Dr. Cook clambered nimbly down Jacob's ladder and with no concern for the cameras trained on him made a rush for his wife. For the moment he even missed the children, who stood a few feet away, but his wife silently led him to them. Then, as he lifted his youngest daughter to his shoulder, the silent, watching crowd that lined the rails of the Oscar II. broke into a storm of cheers.

Officials Are Absent.

Soon there followed a second transfer. From the tug as he stepped ashore it was noticeable that no representative of the nation, the state, or the city was there to greet him.

Bird S. Coler, president of the borough of Brooklyn, had welcomed him on the Grand Republic for that borough, but the city of New York sent no official representative.

But sincere to the point of tumultuousness, his welcome may be best described as a neighborly affair, devoid of official significance.

The E. C. State Normal faculty believes in the earning capacity of the athletic field. Each evening the trainers are on the field practicing the enthusiastic manly students. Football games have already been matched with other leading state schools.

COMBINED SHOWS ARE COMING.

Eyes of Local People Again to Be Tested by Hagenbeck-Wallace Combined Shows of Three Rings.

Thousands of people have almost become cross-eyed because of efforts made to watch all that was going on in a three-ring performance. This was true the last time the Wallace Show exhibited here, and now it is announced that we are again to be challenged to see all that human eyes can see under the great tents of the Wallace Show, combined with the Carl Hagenbeck Trained Animal Show, the date being Oct. 5.

The Hagenbeck Trained Animals composed an exhibition which became universally famous, and when Mr. Wallace combined that show with the big circus bearing his name he did not cut out a single act, but has enlarged his tents and the rings, and by crowding the acts a little closer together, oftentimes having as many as ten and twelve at one time, he has been able to present the program of the two popular shows without a single omission and without putting in a fourth ring. It is enough of a strain to try to watch two stages and three rings, and it might have been much worse had we been called upon to encompass four rings in the horizon of our vision.

In the early portion of the Hagenbeck-Wallace performance the center ring is enclosed with a tall iron fence and in this steeled arena the exhibition of the trained wild beasts takes place, and he it said to the credit of the management, in spite of the frequent and furious bloody battles between the beasts or the men and the beasts that have occurred within this iron cage, never has a spectator of the show been harmed in the slightest. After the wild beasts have performed the iron fence is removed and the usual circus ring is left for the remainder of the performance, domestic animals highly trained being exhibited within the open ring, where a few moments before appeared their cousins from the African and Asiatic jungles.

The combined Hagenbeck-Wallace Show certainly can deliver the goods when it comes to presenting a circus programme of unequalled variety and it will not be surprising if a record-breaking crowd is seen upon our streets when that aggregation shows here on Oct. 5.

NEGLECT THE RIVER ROUTES

Writer in Everybody's Magazine Calls Attention to What He Considers a Mistake.

There lies St. Paul, within a ten-mile freight haul of the Minneapolis flour mills, which send 7,000,000 barrels of flour to Europe every year—and not a barrel of it goes down the grand old avenue to New Orleans and away by the gulf, says a writer in Everybody's. And there is Minneapolis herself—with yearly a larger store of wheat to draw upon, and English milling competition growing keener every year—only ten miles away from an unbroken river channel. But never a cent is spent to bridge that ten miles and increase the city's prosperity by putting its flour more cheaply into the rich cotton fields of Georgia and South Carolina, running from this land of bolls and factories to the greatest of our cotton ports and carrying scarcely a bale of goods or a bale of cotton down to export. And there is the Ohio, braggard of its wonderful coal fleets, which might be run for half their cost and with greater safety—the Ohio, bearing a great creaking, dirty packets so old that in Maine they would be called "old he ones," messing along the bank, picking up freight out of the mud of the shore and dumping more into it, days off schedule, unfit and absolute unfittable for anything like modern traffic.

MADE RECORD HARD TO BEAT

Truthful Yarn That Ended Dispute as to Quickness of Companies in Paying Claims.

A prominent life insurance agent in a western city tells about an argument two rural representatives of insurance companies had recently. They were carrying on their conversation on county court day, and were being listened to by a considerable number of farmers and others. One of the agents declared that his company had established a record for the quick payment of death claims. As evidence of this fact he said that not long before a policyholder had died and his widow had been given a check, covering the amount of the policy, while the funeral was in progress. "That's nothing," quickly responded the other. "Our company has its office in a twenty-story building in New York. It is on the tenth floor. The other day a man insured with us fell from the twentieth floor, and our officers, recognizing that he was a dead-sure claim, handed him a check as he passed our window." The farmers gave the verdict to the last speaker.

He Did Not Like the Tune.

A poor foreign musician was doggedly wrestling with his trombone outside a village inn. He knew that "The Last Chord" was somewhere in that instrument, but the latter seemed loath to part with it. At length the landlord appeared at the door. The poor musician bowed, and, doffing his cap, said, "Musig hath jarns," and smiled. The innkeeper smiled also, and kindly. "Well, not always," he said; "but try that tune outside that red brick house and I'll give you sixpence." Three minutes later the trombonist was back again, mud bespattered and forlorn. "You vos right," he said, slowly and sadly; "musig hath jarns not always—no. A mad fellow out of that house came and me mit a brigg he knocked down—yes. He not like that tune—no, no," and he rubbed the back of his head. "I thought he wouldn't," said the landlord; "he's just done a month's hard labor for stealing a clothesline from a back garden."—Dundee Advertiser.

PILLINGTON'S PATENT

By Amos R. Wells

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

A stock argumentation between Mr. and Mrs. Pillington was the subject of women's inventiveness—or non-inventiveness, rather. Pillington prided himself on his mechanical genius, and was always fishing for an acknowledgment of it from his wife; but she, mindful of a house lumbered from attic to cellar with futile contrivances, observed always a grim silence.

One day, as Mr. Pillington was expatiating on his favorite theme, Mrs. Pillington chanced to be feeding the baby with a nursing bottle.

"I wish," she remarked, "that with all men's superior inventive ability, they would contrive a good way to feed a baby."

Pillington's interest was at once aroused.

"Now, that's just like a woman!" he exclaimed. "Here's a field peculiarly hers. Here's something forced on her attention from the days of Eve. And yet I'll warrant that every patent nursing bottle in the world was invented by a man."

"I should think so!" sighed Mrs. Pillington. "Well, what's the matter with 'em?" he inquired.

"Matter? Everything. You can't keep them clean. The hole gets clogged up with a shred of cloth. If you make it larger, the baby gets the milk too fast. If you keep the air out, it collapses and the baby gets nothing. If you let the air in, the baby gets the colic. Oh, they're horrid!"

"Lemme see it," and Mr. Pillington looked critically at the nursing-bottle. "Maria Pillington, day after to-morrow I will show you what a man can do. Evidently this thing was some woman's makeshift."

For two days the inventor was mysteriously silent, though sagely observant at baby's feeding-time. On the second evening he brought to his wife with an air of triumph, a marvelous affair.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Pillington's Patent Feeding-Bottle!" replied her husband, proudly. "I've filed it. You try it."

Mrs. Pillington examined the apparatus suspiciously.

"What's this big bulb for?"

"That, madam, is to clean it with—force the water in and out by suction; also to force the milk into the mouth. Now, no woman would ever have thought of that."

"I agree with you," remarked Mrs. Pillington, dryly. "And what's this brass arrangement in the neck? Isn't it part of some gas fixture?"

"Yes," Mr. Pillington admitted, unwillingly—"yes, temporarily, it is. But that's the great point. You see this screw? Work it out, and you enlarge the orifice; screw it in, and you diminish the flow of milk. Beautifully simple, and yet no woman would ever have thought of it. Now try it on the baby."

"Never!" shrieked his wife. "What! poison his little froatsy-toatsy with a horrid old brass gas machine?" And she embraced Pillington, Junior, protectively. "Besides, how do you know it'll work? Have you tried it?"

"No need of trying it," replied the inventor. "If you had a mechanical mind you would know it would work just by looking at it. Gimme the baby."

"I won't!" shrieked Mrs. Pillington. "Try your horrid contraption on yourself first. I don't believe you could suck a drop through it."

"I'll show you!" said Mr. Pillington, fiercely. "You see where the milk is?"

Yes, Mrs. Pillington saw.

Then her husband tipped back his head, bottle in the air, and began chewing the rubber neck. He grew red in the face. Evidently he was getting nothing.

"It—it—doesn't seem to come, some way," he confessed, at last.

"Any air-hole in it?" asked Mrs. Pillington, kindly.

"Air-hole? What'd I want of an air-hole?" gasped her husband. "Oh, yes! I have it. Gimme that knitting-needle. Forget a little point." And Mr. Pillington jabbed a hole in the rubber tube that joined the bottle with the section of the gas jet.

"But isn't that an air-hole?" Mrs. Pillington ventured to ask.

"Air-hole nothin'. It's a ventilator. Now I'll show you how to use that screw and bulb. Observe."

Mr. Pillington threw back his head once more, and this time to some purpose. Whether it was the knitting-needle, or the screw, or the big bulb, no one will ever know; but with the inventor's first satisfied swallow the brass broke away, and in one wild spurt a pint of milk flew into Mr. Pillington's face and down his shirt front.

"Gl—gl—gl—f—gl—oo!" spluttered the unfortunate. "Stop your idiotic laughing, Maria Pillington. Why did you make me put in that air-hole? Well, if that isn't just like a woman!" And Mr. Pillington went off to get a clean shirt.

The Girl Across the Way

She Was Good to Look Upon, But—

The young man who figures in this is employed in an office in a downtown skyscraper. His desk is by a window that overlooks a court. Directly across the court from him another person works at a window. Yes, this person is a girl, of course. There wouldn't be any sense in taking off one's coat and recording a lot of facts about two men working at two windows at opposite sides of a court, would there?

Now a young woman, if she be of face and form and garb that constitute a balm to the optics may be a source of much inspiration—if one may believe all that gets into print. Still, if the truth be known in the case of this young man, he might have accomplished more for his employer if there had been no haired, rattled young creature across the way. For the sight of the girl across the way and concentration were things apart. The young man would look at the figure across the court when there were figures on paper right in front of him that he might have looked at. Once he was offered a better job with another firm, but he staid where he was for the sake of the view.

Don't get a wrong impression. It was not in a flirtatious spirit that the young man gazed absently across the court. The creature at the window opposite was not the kind that couldn't make her eyes behave. She had her lamps under perfect control. There was something about her that dispelled any notion one might have to get familiar without a formal introduction.

She had a sweetly serious countenance that made one think she must be a great help to her mother. There was something unusual about her. She had her soft, lustrous hair propped up some with rats, it is true, but not to extremes. Her eyes were full of gentleness and she smiled often. Not at anybody, though—just smiled good humoredly as she took dictation or went ahead with her work.

The young man across the court dividing his attention between the two kinds of figures had never heard her voice, but he knew that it was soft and low and resonant. She didn't come to work with a different outfit on every day, either. But she always wore color combinations that seemed to have grown up together and her shirtwaists were wonderfully fresh and neat. That was one thing that appealed to the young man opposite. She looked like a girl who could make herself presentable without spending so much money that whoever started in to make out the checks would be obliged to quit going to a good tailor for his own clothes.

In the six months or more that the young man had been looking across the court at the features of his ideal, their eyes had never met squarely—not once. She would look over occasionally in a dreamy way, but when the two lines of vision were about to become coincident she would glance leisurely away. It was impossible for one to send any wireless, "Honest, I know you'd like me" message to her. Pretty refreshing, too, the young man opposite told the boys in the office.

She wasn't going around making any chance acquaintances, but he was willing to bet that once a fellow got to know her real well she was the sort of a girl who would take a keen interest in him, would chide him for not wearing a vest on a cool evening when he might catch cold, and would notice every time he wore a new necktie. He went around thinking such thoughts as that all day long. It was a shame, he kept remarking, that a girl like that had to earn her own living and brush elbows with a sordid business world.

At last—and this was only ten days or so ago—he found himself in the realization of one of his fondest hopes. He met her! It happened out at the beach. She had gone out with her sister, and her sister's gentleman friend and this friend was acquainted with an old friend of our hero who was out there, and things worked out so that everybody was introduced all hands around. The young man of the window on the court and the creature of the window opposite strolled away to talk things over until the next dance should start up.

"I've saw you at the window a thousand times," she began. "Of course I never liked to rubber or nothin'. Maw always brought we girls up not to stare at no one, and the boss jest about throws a fit if he sees anybody in the office lookin' as if they wasn't tendin' strictly to biz. I never have knew such a place to work. I'd have went to some other office long ago only the pay's pretty good and I need the cash."

Thus did she talk on, spreading bad grammar and bromides at every breath.

The young man danced with her silently and then excused himself. His illusion was so rudely shattered that he felt like a man who had been struck over the ear with a paving brick. Next week he is going to have his desk moved away from the window.

Cotton Seed Oil Indorsed.

A member of the French farm commission having stated that cotton seed oil was injurious to the health and destroyed the abdominal tissues, Dr. Crawford, of the bureau of animal industry, made experiments which indicated that "purified cotton seed oil is no more injurious than olive oil or cod liver oil."
